The Magic Box

In the box I will put…

The love of a mother that stretches further than the distance to Space

And the heartbreak of a child after arguing with his best friend.

In the box I will put…

The happiness of an orang-utan swinging from tree to tree

And the stealthy slither of a verminous snake gliding across the forest floor

In the box I will put…

The thunder claps from the audience in a packed theatre

And the soft patter of rain drops dancing delicately on the floor.

In the box I will put…

The heat of the warming summer sun beaming across the Sahara Desert

And the freezing shivers of a winters night in the Arctic.

In the box I will put…

The terrifying roar of a lion as it stealthily hunts its unsuspecting prey

And the life threatening bite of a deadly scorpion as it plunges towards the unsuspicious plump frog.

In the box I will put…

The crash of a powerful killer whale smashing against the ocean waves

And the ferocious roar of a terrifying lion as it pounces on its prey.

In the box I will put…

The harmonic tune of the delightful birds singing at the crack of dawn

And the unsettling cries of foxes searching for a midnight snack.

In the box I will put…

The deadly pounce of a lethal panther attacking its prey

And the delicate flutter of a butterflies wings as it playfully floats through the tress.

In the box I will put…

The happiness of an old man looking back ad reminiscing on his youth

And the instant happiness of a family celebrating the birth of a new born child.

In the box I will put…

The happiness of a mother seeing her newborn baby

And sadness of a mother watching watching her child leave home.

In the box I will put…

The alarming sound of razor sharp icicles crashing against the ground

And the delicate flutter of snowflakes dancing towards the floor.

In the box I will put…

The love of parents that fills the air with warmth

And the anger of a toddler screaming with frustration.
